

Trusted Military Criminal Defense Lawyers Providing Strong Representation for U.S. Military Personnel

For many service members, one of the most devastating outcomes of military proceedings is receiving a less-than-honorable discharge. An unfavorable discharge can limit civilian job opportunities, strip away veterans' benefits, and cast a shadow over years of service. This is where skilled military discharge lawyers step in to protect your future.

At Kral Military Defense, attorneys Stephanie Kral and Abbigayle Hunter are dedicated to helping service members fight unjust discharges. Both are veterans who know the value of honorable service and the lifelong consequences that a negative discharge can bring.

Why a Military Discharge Lawyer Matters

Military attorneys assigned to your case may not have the time or resources to mount an aggressive defense. In contrast, civilian military discharge lawyers have the independence and expertise to thoroughly analyze your case, challenge improper procedures, and advocate for the best possible outcome.

Whether you are facing administrative separation, an other-than-honorable discharge, or trying to upgrade your discharge status after leaving the service, Kral Military Defense can guide you through the process with experience and determination.

Protecting Your Record and Reputation

A discharge is not just a piece of paperwork—it affects your reputation, your future employment, and your benefits as a veteran. Attorneys Kral and Hunter know how important it is to protect your service record. Their deep understanding of military justice attorneys' roles and the UCMJ allows them to identify weaknesses in the government's case and build strong defenses for their clients.
